

Lambent receives IT award by government of Maharashtra

September 11, 2006

Lambent, a wholly owned company of Induslogic Inc and software development company in Nagpur, has been honoured with the prestigious special achievement category IT award by the government of Maharashtra.

This is part of an annual IT Award program instituted by the state government designed to recognize and reward IT companies for their contribution throughout the state. This is in recognition of Lambent being the largest IT contributor in the entire Vidarbha region in the year 2006.

Mukul Jain, COO at Induslogic, said, " We, on behalf of Induslogic feel honoured and extremely happy that Lambent, a fully owned company by Induslogic has received such a prestigious award."

Induslogic is a product development services company and a partner to many emerging software leaders helping them bring great products to market in less time and at less cost. It has also developed a unique Joint-Venture model of partnering with companies to create a dedicated global delivery center.
